

ADHD Weekend Reset Mini

A kind, low-pressure weekend: brain dump, pick three, tidy sprints, done is enough.

What's inside

• Brain dump	p.2
• Pick three, with timers	p.3
• The 15-minute tidy sprints	p.4
• Easy food for the weekend	p.5
• Done is enough: the wind-down page	p.6

How to use it

1. Empty your head onto the brain dump page. Everything, no order.
2. Circle three things. Only three. The rest can wait.
3. Do tidy sprints with a timer, a playlist or someone in the room.
4. Finish on the 'done is enough' page so the weekend ends on a win.

Print it or type into it

Print at 100% on A4, or click into any box to type. Written to be kind to busy, distractible brains. It is a planner, not medical advice.

Brain dump

Write everything that's buzzing around. Jobs, worries, ideas, things to buy. No order.

Notes

Pick three

From the brain dump, pick three. Write the first tiny step for each.

Must-do 1

The job

Timer

Tiny first step

Done

If I get stuck, I will

Must-do 2

The job

Timer

Tiny first step

Done

If I get stuck, I will

Must-do 3

The job

Timer

Tiny first step

Done

If I get stuck, I will

Ten-minute rule

Start with ten minutes on a timer. If you want to keep going when it rings, great. If not, that still counts.

Parking lot good ideas for another day

Notes

Put a timer on, music up. Stop when it rings. Tick the box.

Sprint	What counts as done	Sat	Sun
Kitchen	dishes in, surfaces clear, bin out	☐	☐
Floor	everything off the floor into one basket	☐	☐
Laundry	one load on, one load put away	☐	☐
Bedroom	bed made, clothes in the basket	☐	☐
Bathroom	wipe the sink and loo, fresh towels	☐	☐
Hallway	shoes paired, coats on hooks	☐	☐
Paper	post into one pile: bin, act, keep	☐	☐
Car or bag	rubbish out, chargers back	☐	☐

Many people find tidying easier with someone else in the room or on a video call, even if they're doing something different. It's worth a try.

No recipes needed. Pick, shop, done.

Write what you did. Small things count.